Syllabus

Catalog Description:

Professional development, ethical inquiry, and discussion and evaluation of interdisciplinary research in a colloquium setting. In successive fall semesters, students participate in three one-credit colloquia that include faculty and students from across the program.

Course Description:

The Colloquium in Communication, Rhetoric, and Digital Media (CRDM) provides the guidance and preparation that students need to succeed in the CRDM program and in their future career. It provides guidance on professional preparation, mentorship through the program, and assistance to students entering academic and non-academic job markets. Another objective is to create an environment where those students with more experience assist those with less. Given our collective experiences, we all have different abilities to instruct and guide each other. The colloquium is structured to facilitate these kinds of interactions.

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the semester students will be able to:

- demonstrate an understanding of how to prepare themselves professionally to succeed in the job market;
- demonstrate an understanding of how to proceed through the CRDM program and meet key academic milestones;
- learn to produce effective academic texts, including reading lists, dissertation prospectuses, and job application letters, and
- share the wisdom of their experiences with other cohorts.

CHASS CAREER SERVICES:

CHASS Career Services are available through the Career Development Center. Your career contacts are: Jane Matthews and Woody Catoe. Make appointments through ePACK – ncsu.edu/epack.
